Mainers' Host Families Enjoy Rewarding Experiences

By Renée Morin

Baseball has long been called “America’s Pastime.” If this is true, then “Sanford’s Pastime” is watching the Sanford Mainers play at Goodall Park. Since 2002, college baseball players from all over the country have come to Sanford to play for the Mainers. That begs the question, “Where do they stay?” While some players can drive home or stay with relatives, the rest are housed by Sanford-Springvale residents. The Sanford Springvale News interviewed Host Family Coordinator Josh Ouellette and longtime host family member Stephanie Simpson to learn more.

Stephanie Simpson and her husband, Richard Simpson, have lived in Sanford for 17 years, ever since she fell in love with Maine on a visit to meet her future in-laws. The pair have three children, stepdaughter Jolie (20), son Richie (17), and daughter Savannah (13). They have acted as a host family for the Mainers every season since 2013 except for the canceled 2020 season.

The Simpson family decided to take up hosting after receiving reassurances from their friends that hosting was “not as hard as you would think,” and determining that their kids were at a good age to handle another member of the household. The fact that their son Richie also played baseball played a part as well.

The family has since hosted players from across the country, including players from New Jersey, California, Kansas City, South Carolina, Massachusetts and New York. Simpson has kept in touch with most of these players via social media. She described receiving texts from former players on Mothers’ Day and her birthday. She also explained how she liked to witness the players starting their lives outside of baseball and watching them grow as human beings, with the first player the family hosted in 2013 now married and they have a child.

As for the hosting itself, she has greatly enjoyed the experience, describing the players as friendly, appreciative, respectful of her home and rules and having good manners. She shared fond memories of her players including tubing with her kids, getting a picture of everyone riding on the log flume at Funtown-Splashtown each year and a humorous incident where a player flooded the kitchen with bubbles after having mistakenly used Dawn dish soap instead of dish detergent. She has also enjoyed meeting the players’ families at the social events held by the Mainers.

One player, who Simpson says left a big impression on her son, was catcher Stevie Burman, who would play catch and soccer with the kids. Her son Richie cried when the player had to leave at the end of the 2014 season. Burman signed a bat for Richie, which he slept with for months afterwards.

When asked if she would recommend hosting to anyone else, Simpson replied, “absolutely.” She said the Mainers were always looking for new host families, and if people have questions, they should reach out to the Mainers’ staff. She described the players as good role models for kids and said that hosting them was a heartwarming experience and like having sons across the country. She affectionately referred to the players as her "summer sons." For Simpson, the pressures on her own time were not much of an issue, because the players are also very busy and just need a place to sleep. As an added bonus for the entire host family, they receive season passes to watch their players in action.

Some families might wonder whether there could be trouble with players following household rules. Simpson says she has not had any problems but if any do arise, families can contact the host family coordinator. She referred to the Mainers as a "very supportive organization" regarding any issues that come up.

When asked about the vetting process for players, Ouellette explained that to play college baseball, players must be in good standing with their school and players' coaches and Mainers' staff members talked prior to any decision. Players must also sign the player handbook.

Ouellette says that he wants to combat concerns associated with hosting which might discourage potential volunteers. Many people are under a mistaken belief that hosting is a major commitment that requires all sorts of free time. He explained that this is not true and many of the host families have full-time jobs and busy lives themselves.

The criteria to be a host family entails having a spare bedroom or other adequate sleeping quarters like a finished basement, access to a bathroom and kitchen and a safe, clean, and healthy living space. Transportation and food are taken care of by the Mainers, though having some food available in the fridge or pantry is encouraged. He emphasized that players will be busy elsewhere so there is no need to change your day-to-day routine.

"The experience is what you make of it. You don't have to change your life to do this," said Ouellette.

Jeff Hanselmann Attends Culinary Institute of America Pastry Course

By Lisa Blanchette

Four years ago, Jeff Hanselmann changed careers. People do that all the time, but Jeff made a very big change during a very difficult economic time. He went from a 20-year career in construction to opening Frannie's, a mini-donut shop on Main Street in Sanford. He didn't have a culinary background but had the support of family and friends who helped with business management expertise. He was also able to draw on his experience managing Captain Jack's, a donut shop at McDougals Orchard, before opening Frannie's. Jeff feels things have gone pretty well considering much of this four-year period has been tainted by the sting of COVID.

Without a professional baking background, there was a learning curve. Jeff said it was actually "kind of fun." One can learn from trial and error and from the internet, but when the opportunity to apply for a HUB Grant through the Small Business Administration presented itself, he accepted the help, applied for the grant and was approved. He used this funding to attend a pastry bootcamp at the Culinary Institute of America in Hyde Park, New York. The CIA, as it's known, is one of the top culinary schools in the country. This was a chance to attend a formal culinary course in an expansive kitchen with 16 other professional bakers. Their instructor was a veteran professional baker with 50 years of experience, who was trained at Johnson & Wales, another of the top culinary schools in the country.

This experience may not have happened if not for the grant, so Jeff is thankful for the opportunity that the funding provided. He thoroughly enjoyed the course, especially its focus on the methodology of baking, and would consider taking more courses there or at other culinary institutes in the future - possibly a course on artisan bread baking.

You will notice new additions to the menu at Frannie's very soon thanks to this experience at the CIA. Croissants and puff pastries will be first. Then sometime in the future we should be seeing crème brulee mini donuts and possibly some mini cakes. If Frannie's isn't a regular weekend stop on your way through downtown, you might want to consider making it one! ■

Volunteers give their time and talent at YCCAC Head Start & Early Head Start. PHOTO: YCCAC

A day of action at YCCAC: Volunteers from Hannaford Supermarkets, Partners Bank and the United Way of Southern Maine gathered together on June 21 to spruce up the York County Community Action Corp. (YCCAC) Head Start & Early Head Start property and home office. Despite the June heat wave that hit that week, much was accomplished by this team of energetic volunteers.

Time change for summer food distribution: The new hours for the Free Community Food Distribution, provided by Sanford Backpack Program, are 10 am to 11:30 am every Thursday through Aug. 22. Food is distributed at Sanford High School and the Willard School. FMI about the program or to volunteer, contact lori@strongersanford.org.

Red Cross needs your help: An American Red Cross blood drive is scheduled at the Alfred Parish Church, 8 Kennebunk Rd., on July 17 from 10 am to 3 pm. Log onto the Red Cross website here to schedule a time to donate. <https://www.redcross-blood.org/give.html/find-drive>

Many hands make light work: Teen volunteers are needed at Springvale Library this summer. This opportunity is a good way for teens to earn community service hours. Those interested in helping out should see Sheila Dube at the library.

Service-minded Sanford couple gets new home: Habitat for Humanity York County completed its 35th affordable home and handed over the keys to its new owners, Diego and Eileen Gonzalez. The Gonzalezes have served their county and community for decades. Eileen spent most of her career as a nurse and in-home hospice caregiver in Vermont. Diego, who enlisted in the Navy in 1969, served as a member of a flight control squadron for naval amphibious operations. The Gonzalezes, who have lived in Sanford for over 15 years, did more than their part, putting in over 600 volunteer hours with Habitat for Humanity — well surpassing the program requirement of 400 hours.

In the (strike) zone: Officer Brandon Wambolt of the Sanford Police Department was honored to toss out the first pitch at Goodall Park on June 26 for the Sanford Mainers game versus the North Adams SteepleCats. This game was designated the Mainers' annual First Responders Appreciation Night, when first responders and their families receive free admission.

Healthy and budget-friendly meal prep for the family: A free instructional cooking program, Cooking Matters Families, is being offered at the Sanford-Springvale YMCA to teach families how to prepare meals that are healthy, tasty, and low cost. Each of the six interactive classes engages participants in hands-on meal preparation, practical nutrition tips, and food budgeting skills. Classes will be held from 2 pm to 4 pm on Tuesdays — July 16, July 23, July 30, Aug. 6, Aug. 20 and Aug. 27. Participants will receive a free recipe book with healthy, low-cost recipes and nutrition tips as well as take-home recipe bags filled with ingredients for recipes made during class. Space is limited. To sign up, email Megan Letendre, the University of New England's nutrition education coordinator, at mletendre@une.edu.

Pipe and paving projects progress:

According to a Sanford Water District post on June 28, progress on its two main replacement projects on Grammar Road and Spencer Hill Road are a week or two from completion. At both locations, the older cast iron pipes, which have experienced many breaks and leaks over the years, are being replaced with new ductile iron water lines. The new installation should improve water quality and eliminate the ongoing expense of making repairs. On Spencer Hill Road, the water district is partnering with the city to pave the entire road once the water main replacements are complete.

YCCAC announces Orange Line schedule change:

During July and August, York County Community Action Corp. Transportation will no longer stop at York County Community College in Wells on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Their regularly scheduled seven-day service will resume after Labor Day. FMI on bus routes and schedules, go here. <https://www.yccac.org/bus-routes-schedules>

Food donations are needed weekly:

St. Thérèse Food Closet is in constant need of replenishing a variety of food items such as cereal, crackers, canned tuna, canned chicken, baked beans, jams and jellies, canned fruit, and Pop Tarts. The Food Closet is open every Thursday from noon to 2 pm. Call Carlene Roy at 207-793-8912 with questions.

It takes a village: Through the work of many volunteers who donate food and many others who use the organization's Amazon wish list to provide items such as bug spray, sunscreen, snacks, drinks and more, It Takes a Village 207 continues to feed the unhoused. Founded in 2020, the organization joined forces with Maine Homeless Veterans Alliance, and works to help people who are struggling get back on their feet. City Council Discusses Flying Gadsden Flag on Fourth of July

By Renée Morin

The agenda of the July 2 City Council meeting included whether to fly the Gadsden flag, also known as the “Don’t Tread on Me” flag, outside of City Hall this Fourth of July. A request to fly the flag was made by Councilor Jonathan Martell. His request was in compliance with the resolution adopted by the council on July 5, 2022, regarding the display of flags other than the national, state, or P.O.W. flags on city property.

The legal restrictions on the flying of flags required the city’s flag policy to be in compliance with US Supreme Court rulings addressing government speech, to be non-discriminatory, to not promote any religion or political affiliation and to comply with the US Flag Codes. A review done in June 2024 found the city’s policy was in compliance with these restrictions.

The discussion began with the reading of two emails from Sanford Springvale News volunteers. Kevin McKeon wrote that the flag was flown by American ships during the American Revolution. “The snake was a symbol of trying to fire up the people to convince them to join the revolution.”

Zendelle Bouchard conveyed her opposition to the request on the grounds that the original use of the Gadsden flag was to protest the undemocratic colonial rule of the British government. In Bouchard’s view, many who fly the flag today are attempting to equate the British rule the colonists rebelled against to our democratically elected government. She doesn’t believe this is an appropriate message for the City Council to convey about another elected assembly.

Bouchard also argued that requests to fly the Gadsden flag were motivated by a desire to discourage the display of the Pride flag by overwhelming the City Council with requests. She believes the display of the Pride flag is a moral issue rather than a political one and is not comparable to the Gadsden flag.

Councilor Robert Stackpole shared his view that the flag is from the American Revolution, regardless of its modern usage. He questioned the benefit to the community of flying the Gadsden flag. It’s his opinion that displaying the Pride flag benefits the people of Sanford-Springvale, but flying the Gadsden flag would not.

Martell shared that he doesn’t think any flags other than the national, state, or P.O.W. flags should be flown outside of City Hall. Martell continued, “so, my reasoning for requesting this was to bring to light the fact that you can request any flag, and personally I don’t think that that should be even in our policies.” He then made a request to revisit the policy in the future and informed the council he would not be moving forward with his original request. ■

Lady Beetles: Guardians of Gardens and Homes

The name “ladybug” was coined by European farmers who prayed to the Virgin Mary when pests began eating their crops. After ladybugs came and wiped out the invading insects, the farmers named them “Beetle of Our Lady”. This eventually was shortened to “Lady beetle” and “Ladybug.” Actually, they are beetles, members of the 285-million-year-old Coleoptera order of insects, the largest order of animals on Earth with about 400,000 species comprising about 40% of all insects and about 25% of all animal species! Bugs are similar to beetles, but they’re a completely different type of insect; the main difference is that beetles have chewing mouthparts, where bugs have a piercing beak called a rostrum which acts like a hypodermic needle which they use to suck juices from plants or animals. Beetles are the only insects with hardened forewings that cover and protect their flying wings. Watch as they hatch, and fly. Notice that they’re not “spotted” until their forewings harden after emerging from their cocoon.

The multi-color Asian ladybugs, a member of the 190-million-year-old beetle family of about 6,000 species, are the visitors we see seeking shelter in people’s houses in September. Their color varies from pale yellow to a bright red orange, with varying degrees of spot brilliance and spot size. A fully spotted beetle will have 10 black spots.

Introduced as a biological control agent in various states beginning in 1916, they didn’t seem to have become established. Then, in 1988, specimens were found in Louisiana, probably from Asian cargo shipping to New Orleans. Since the early 1990s, this exotic lady beetle has proliferated and moved rapidly across much of the United States east of the Mississippi River, along the West Coast, and into eastern Canada.

Lady beetles have hardened forewings that protect their flying wings during walking and open up for flight. Inset: Lady beetle foraging for aphids, mites, small insect and other lady beetle larvae. PHOTO: flickr

Alpine hikers will at times find them by the thousands on sunny, rocky outcrops as they seek warm shelter. Homeowners find them a nuisance when they sometimes invade houses and buildings in large numbers in the fall, appearing again on warm, sunny days in February and March. But they do not breed, lay eggs, or feed inside the home, and are not structurally-damaging. If agitated or squashed, however, the beetles may exhibit a defensive reaction known as “reflex bleeding,” in which a yellow fluid with an unpleasant odor is released from leg joints. This reaction helps protect beetles from predators, such as birds. But in the home, the fluid may stain walls and fabrics. Some of us simply let them be if autumn entry occurs. Others brush them into a shoebox, store it away, and release them in the spring, when they will mate.

Gardeners and agriculturalists consider lady beetles to be beneficial, preying on many different soft-bodied insect pests on a variety of crops. An adult beetle is capable of eating 90 to 270 aphids per day, and each larva can consume 600 to 1,200 aphids during its development!

The life cycle of the ladybug is fascinating. 10-15, yellowish, tiny eggs, laid under leaves, generally hatch in three to five days. Looking like tiny alligators, the larvae are hungry, feeding for about two weeks on aphids, scale insects, and other soft-bodied invertebrates, gobbling up 600 to 1,200 aphids during this life stage. The chrysalis stage lasts about five to six days, looking like a tiny shrimp attached to a leaf. After emergence, adults can live as long as two to three years eating 90 to 270 aphids per day! Another common beetle is our firefly, another story for later. ■

As I Heard It: DaPonte String Quartet Concert Review

By Dr. Morton Gold

Two extraordinary events occurred at the Sanford Springvale Historical Museum last night. The first was the first appearance in Sanford by the DaPonte String Quartet (plus two superb guests) and the second was the performance of both sextets by Brahms at the same concert. There may have been a time, perhaps as recently as ten years ago, when this superb ensemble may have been regarded as a local group when compared to the internationally known Portland String Quartet. That was then. Since that time all four members of the PSQ have changed (one death, three retirements.) Meanwhile, only the first violinist was changed in the DaPonte quartet (arthritis) and the quality and vitality of this group has only soared. Taking nothing away from the Portlanders, on the basis of what I heard (and experienced) tonight, the DaPonte need not be regarded as poor relations musically speaking, but rather as equals. They are strong in each member and their replacement for Mr. Liva, Philipp Elssner is one fine violinist. Period. The other members of the ensemble are Lydia Forbes, violin, Kirsten Monke, viola and Myles Jordan, cello. Each may be regarded as an all-star.

The guest artists for this concert included Marcus Thompson, viola and Scott Kluksdahl, cello. They were up to the standards of their colleagues. The quartet rehearses five days a week and practices individually every day. This would help to explain why their ensemble is razor sharp, their intonation perfect, and their interpretation as good as it gets.

The last time I heard them play was many years ago. They were very good then; they are superb now in my opinion. The second event was the performance of both of the sextets composed by Brahms (addition of a second viola and cello.) Performance of either work is rare simply because of the demands placed on the performers by the composer as well as the addition of two more musicians who have to have the technical know-how as well as similar timbres of their colleagues. Personally, I liked the exuberant first sextet to the more introspective second. Both are masterpieces.

Highlights of this concert would have to include the lush and resonant sound of the group, the precise pizzicato (plucked strings), the superb intonation, the increase and decrease in volume (where called for) and the sheer musicality of the group. Wherever there was a principle motive played in the cello, viola or first violin, no matter how engaged the others were, that idea was never obscured. Both works were beautifully performed as a result of careful and abundant practice. For the second sextet, the musicians who played the first parts exchanged places with their colleagues with no difference either in cohesion, tone or anything else. My only regret is that more folks who would have enjoyed this quality performance were not there to enjoy it. The DaPonte String Quartet will appear at the Museum again on August 4. I hope their appearance will be better advertised and a larger crowd will appear. ■

Water Ski Team Makes a Summer Splash

By Brian Boisvert

The Maine Attraction Water Ski Show Team, a beloved local tradition for over 30 years, is gearing up for another exciting summer season. The team promises a thrilling show filled with crowd-pleasing stunts and a touch of friendly competition.

Founded by Mark and Lori Hegarty in the early 90s, the Maine Attraction has grown from a small local club to a beloved community staple, drawing crowds to Number One Pond every summer. The idea was born out of the Hegarty's passion for show skiing, which they brought to Maine after their successful careers at Sea World in Orlando. Over the years, the team has seen hundreds of members, each contributing to its vibrant history.

And the family tradition continues into the next generation. Son Peter Hegarty, a longtime member of the team, is back in Maine after seven years as a professional water skier in Florida.

Members of the Maine Attraction are planning an impressive summer show

Alongside his sister, Katelyn Gray, Peter is co-directing this year's show. "Our show is shaping up well, and I'm very excited to be home with family for a few months," Peter shared.

This year's show involves nearly 65 members, including over 40 skiers, four boat drivers, two announcers, a sound technician, and numerous behind-the-scenes helpers. "It certainly takes a village to put the entire performance together," Peter noted.

The show's theme this year is "The Yacht Club." Audiences will be treated to a lighthearted story where two contrasting groups of skiers, the elegant Yacht Clubbers and the daredevil Hooligans, learn to overcome their differences and share their love of the water.

Water ski enthusiasts can expect to see a variety of acts throughout the show, including barefooting and freestyle jumping, along with graceful maneuvers like swivel skiing and ballet skiing. They also have a goal of making a "conversion pyramid," a complex maneuver where two separate pyramids transform into a towering four-tier structure, which is sure to be a highlight of the season.

Adding to the excitement is the team's new twin-rig boat, with two 150hp Mercury outboard motors. This powerful addition will allow the Maine Attraction to showcase even bigger and more impressive stunts.

Beyond dazzling performances, the

Council Votes to Move Toward Polling Place Consolidation

By Zendelle Bouchard

At its regular meeting on July 2, the Sanford City Council voted 6-1 to move toward consolidating the City's three polling places to one location beginning with the presidential election in November. If they ultimately approve the consolidation, the single polling place for Sanford and Springvale will be at Sanford High School/SRTC. The process for approving the change will include a public hearing. The Council must vote on the issue by Aug. 6 for the change to take effect in time for the Nov. 5 election.

Over the past several months City officials have worked closely with School Department officials on the proposal. Superintendent of Schools Matt Nelson said SHS/SRTC would be closed on Election Day, but that all other schools would remain open.

York County Community Action Corp. Transportation Director Tom Reinauer said his agency could add a stop

Emily Sheffield, Executive Director of Nason Community Center, which is currently the Ward 1 polling place, emailed her support for the change.

She said the Early Learning Center located at Nasson would have to close for the day due to safety concerns, if the presidential election were held there.

Ed Cormier, a Sanford resident who has served as the Ward 1 poll warden for several years, described the many hours of work that goes into setting up and holding an election. He said the poll workers, most of whom are elderly, work twelve hours straight. "By consolidating to one location, we can give them shifts instead of making them work the whole day," he said.

Councilor Jonathan Martell called the consolidation plan an attempt at "voter suppression before a critical election." He said voters wouldn't know about the change and would go to the wrong location. City Clerk Sue Cote responded that she would be mailing a letter to every registered voter in the city, as well as publicizing the change on social media, in the Sanford Springvale News and on the city's website.

The Council voted 6-1 to continue the process leading to consolidation, with Martell the lone vote in opposition.

Cote first raised the issue of consolidation last fall, as a way to make it easier to find enough poll workers and so residents would always know where to vote. There would be cost savings to the city with the school budget referendum, which always has a low turnout. She said at busy presidential elections, staff would be able to handle the volume with more lines for check-in and more voting machines. She noted that Westbrook, Waterville and Bangor each have a single voting location. At that time, she proposed Veterans Memorial Gym as the single polling place for the city. But at a public hearing, several people spoke against consolidation in general and the gym location in particular, noting difficulties with parking and access. The discussion then pivoted to using SHS, which has plenty of parking and is fully handicapped accessible. ■

Planning Update - June 2024

By Kendra Williams

Stenton Trust Building: The original developer has backed out of a deal, approved by the Planning Board in June of 2023, to develop the mill at 13 River Street into apartments. The Sanford Sewer District has requested an extension with the hope of finding another developer. At its June 5 meeting, the Planning Board approved the extension to redevelop the vacant mill building into 90 mixed income residential units with associated parking, landscaping and stormwater management.

Central Park Residences: At its June 25 meeting, the Planning Board approved the application and a parking waiver for a minor amendment to a major subdivision, originally approved in October 2021, to change 4 of the apartments from 1-bedroom to 2-bedroom units. The property at 10-14 School Street and 6 Bodwell Street is owned by ReinCorp.

Levesque's Excavation: An application to construct a 9,840 square foot structure with approximately 9,300 square feet of parking on property owned by LM&J Properties LLC at 402 Lebanon Street/Route 202 was approved by the Planning Board after the City Council approved an ordinance change.

Townhouse Solar: At the Planning Board's June 5 meeting, an application to revise a proposed solar power generation facility to a reduced solar array footprint, on property owned by Townhouse Properties at Hanson Ridge Road and Angola Street, was tabled for a second time. The Planning Board wanted a better planting plan for the required 50-foot buffer and there was concern about the storm runoff onto Angola and East Streets. At its June 25 meeting, it was approved after the Planning Board determined their conditions and concerns were satisfied.

Whispering Pines: The Planning Board held a public hearing at its June 5 meeting for an application by Scarborough Woods, LLC to construct a 2-story multifamily building with 16 dwelling units. Some concerns remained about the right of way at the lower portion of the development.

Londonderry Lane: At its June 24 meeting, the Site Plan Review Committee (SPRC) reviewed an application for a 6-lot subdivision with a private way on property located on Railroad Avenue and Ridley Road and owned by Thibeault Properties and Investments, LLC. They voted to send it to the Planning Board.

York County Community College: The SPRC also considered a request for an amendment to a major site plan by York County Community College. The request is to expand their Sanford Industrial Trades Learning Center by adding a 10,400 square foot addition on property at 60 Community Drive owned by the Maine Community College System. The addition would consist of welding labs, classrooms, offices, parking and loading areas. ■
